MARY BALDWIN COLLEGE

Dr. Fox Conducts The Future of MBC

Entering a college that may not seem credible to many may cause one to feel doubtful about completing an entire four years at such an institution. Many young ladies seeking a college degree today would like to feel secure and certain that their degree earned will be worth more than just a certificate of completion. To ensure the value of the degree, Mary Baldwin College has developed a vision to compose the future of the Mary Baldwin College community know as the ten year strategic plan.

Mary Baldwin College enrolls more than 2,000 students of diverse ages and backgrounds from across America and the world on the 54 acres of historic campus in Staunton, Virginia. This college also has established the highest standards of academic excellence for women's liberal education through ground-breaking programs and embryonic tradition.

Liberal education is indeed the most sensible and necessary form of education for our entire nation of college-bound students. A liberal education teaches survival and leadership skills as well as capabilities, through general education requirements and a strong academic major.

The vision for this college is of all programs within an all-college identity that will be nationally recognized as a MBC institution because of its distinguishing signature programs and experiences offered by a learning community, emphasizing the implementation of mind, body, and character.

In order to realize this vision, the colleges strategic plan details five strategic initiatives and many goals. The initiatives are connected to one another as building blocks. As a foundation of the strategic plan, it is of the essence that Mary Baldwin Funds it's Future, and Refunds their environment for teaching and learning by maintaining and attracting the faculty and landscape. At the heart of what we hope to achieve, we must unite and enrich our community. Finally, as fundamental components that lead the way to our future must Sharpen Our Focus on Academic Excellence, and as a crowning achiever make personal alterations a priority for the Mary Baldwin College community and its students.

Many students are pleased with the fact that President Pamela Fox is trying to improve the college for the current students and the students to come. Students also explain they love that it's based off of financial aide.

These proposed ten progressive experiences, both curricular and co-curricular will characterize "the Mary Baldwin College difference"

"A threshold experience will create threshold or gateway experiences for all students that include orientation to the college, exposure to its history and tradition and the development of community. This will focus particularly on the first year experience for traditional students."

Many students believe it's important to have an institution to have common goals to work towards and to have these goals written down. The undergraduate ladies explain that anytime a group gets together and collectively goes through a visioning process, it is always good.

"Each student will develop a personalized learning plan and portfolio, planning academic and enriching co-curricular experiences, intentionally making purposeful choices and connections within the reflective electronic learning portfolio."

"Each student will have a personalized wellness and fitness plan."

"A network of mentors and partners will support students, including peer faculty and staff, and alumnae/ alumni mentors."

"Each student will participate in active learning communities, such as common courses or themed residence halls."

"We will certainly offer for each student a distinctive academic major or interdisplinary focus."

"Practical and experiential learning will connect theory with practice through community service learning and internships."

"We aspire to provide international and multicultural experiences, offering at or no cost an international experience to all students either during May term or through a rich network of university exchanges for a semester or academic ear."

"A capstone experience will provide a culminating, synthesizing undergraduate research experience."

"Finally we will enrich our Life Career Transition Program."

This unique set of 10 experiences combines new and inspirational opportunities with strengths that the college has already demonstrated in its current programs. "The Mary Baldwin College difference" would thus ensure that the institution remains a vibrant learning community without walls, connecting life both in and out of the classroom, creating a gateway to lifelong learning.

The idea of expanding the campus and moving the commuters is very appealing to many students. Several MBC ladies are also impressed with the idea that President Fox likes the idea of single sex education while still trying to protect the all-women environment.

"I believe the strategic plan will increase the value of our degree," explains Phyllis Gilmore '06.

"Mary Baldwin nurtures the leadership abilities inherent in each of us. The rich diversity of human experience and the power of our imagination and creativity fuel the true aspiration of a 21st century liberal education—to liberate our minds, hearts, and dreams," says President Pamela Fox.

CLASS OF 2008

Below: Senior HC members Erin Storey (top) and Claire Crain stand by as the Freshmen sign the Honor and Judicial Codes.

Above: Dr. Fox processes with faculty and staff. Her red robe represents the University of Cincinnati, her alma mater.

Walking down the aisle towards a table to sign a sheet of paper in front of hundreds of people including student leaders, faculty, staff, and peers may not seem like a big deal when you're only a freshman. Your signature on this document welcomes and initiates you into the Mary Baldwin family. By creating a diverse and comfortable atmosphere, MBC ensures the legitimacy of a self-run campus by committing students to the signing of the Honor Pledge.

Charter Day is a time each year when new students sign the Honor Pledge. On this day, during the first week of the academic year, the Student Government Association charter is presented to a member of the Board of Trustees through the college president as a renewal of the commitment to independence, self- governing, and self-determination. Upper-class students, faculty, and staff members endorse their support of the honor system at this time as well.

Every freshman, upper-class woman, or faculty and staff member in attendance unites in recitation of the Honor Pledge.

The Honor Council strives to promote the spirit of honor throughout all aspects of campus life. The Council assumes responsibility for the orientation of all students to the Honor System.

I shall endeavor faithfully to order my life accordingly.
I will not lie, cheat, steal, plagiarize,
or violate my pledge of confidentiality.
I will encourage others to fulfill the ideals of the honor system and will meet my responsibility to the community by reporting incidents of honor offenses.

Signature Ball

Midnight Masquerade

Walking into a room filled with beautiful gowns and innovative masks can create an imaginative world that captures one from reality. While escaping this realism it is certain that an individual will seek adventures and excitement such as dancing, socializing, and participating in activities.

Signature Weekend took place on Saturday, January 29th. It was a rock and roll night to remember for students. Another highlight of the weekend was Skate Town which was Friday January, 28th. Students dressed up as their favorite celebrities to compete for cash prizes.

The organization's premier event, Signature Ball, was a successful turnout as students danced the night away. Held in an exquisitely adorned Hunt Dining Hall, the formal dance invited all students to wear their best garments while showing off their individualistic styles. A mock casino setup at the event offered a diversion of friendly wagering. Students were able to indulge in poker games and win prizes. Similar to last year the unforgettable event offered a live band in the East Wing of the dining hall as well as an alternative DJ dance party in the West side. Photographs were available in the Nuthouse.

It was definitely a night to remember as students showed off their elegant gowns and danced the night away.

Smyth Leadership Lecture

by Dawn Medley, asst. dir. of communication

It is difficult to imagine MBC without the contributions of H. Gordon and Mary Beth Reed Smyth. They have established scholarships. They set remarkable examples of community involvement and philanthropy.

And – in one of the couple's continuing legacies at MBC – they give Mary Baldwin students and the community privileged access to inspirational female business leaders through the Smyth Leadership Lecture Series.

Judy Galloway, president of New York City-based marketing company The Young Group, infused the 2005 Smyth Leadership Lecture with energy and wisdom about the cutting-edge world of marketing beauty, health, and home products for clients such as Avon, Revlon, Johnson & Johnson, and MOEN. Galloway is a 1969 graduate of Mary Baldwin College.

Galloway began her career in Bloomingdale's executive training program, and later founded an entrepreneurial marketing and research company, Galloway Marketing Inc.

The Smyths have long supported – in meaningful ways and with their distinctive personal touch – education, leadership, culture, and historical preservation in Staunton and beyond. In addition to the Leadership Lecture, the Smyth Foundation also underwrites the Smyth Business Program, which earlier this month featured Susan Timmons, CEO of Lead Virginia. The Smyth funding also provides for an annual senior networking dinner at the college, which features young alumnae/i who meet with seniors prior to graduation.

Professors

Student's acceptance at Mary Baldwin College, range from students having different intelligences and abilities. A strong liberal arts education is a good way to retain survival and leadership skills. Liberal arts is about living a good life, not just getting a good job. Nothing worthwhile is easy. The professors are definitely there to help students accomplish exceeding their limits in the Mary Baldwin classroom. They won't hand it to you but professors can certainly be a helping and encouraging hand in the time of need. When you graduate, you'll know you've accomplished something, and, like so many other Mary Baldwin alumnae, you'll be prepared to make your mark on whatever occupation you choose.

Professors of Mary Baldwin College prepare challenging and exciting courses that assist students in choosing successful careers and aiming for higher positions in the work force. More than 20% of women in Congress, and 30% of a Business Week list of rising women stars in Corporate America graduate from all-women institutions.

Mary Baldwin's atmosphere allows students to feel included and welcome in the classroom. This is a school focused on 'teaching-first' with an 11 to 1 student/faculty ratio that will insure that your major/minor is designed to suit your needs. Unlike other universities, our unique and supporting professors allow one to feel like an individual and not a number. Every student is advised by full-time faculty, and nearly all of your work – coursework, research, academic growth – will be completed under the guidance of faculty. It is the goal of Mary Baldwin that each student receives an individualized and freethinking education. A Mary Baldwin education will allow one to receive a broad exposure to information technology, quantitative reasoning, and world perspectives in order to achieve the full benefits of a liberal arts education that will allocate the most flexibility one needs to succeed in life. Professors are definitely the building blocks to one's learning system and can assist in constructing character and academic achievement at Mary Baldwin College.

Virginia Women's Insitute for Leadership

This year the Virginia Women's Institute for Leadership celebrated 10 years of success with a fun filled weekend including several parades starting with New York's annual St. Patrick's Day parade on Thursday, the anniversary parade on Friday, and the Alumnae parade of Saturday with an elegant military ball that evening.

VWIL was developed in 1993 after the U.S. Supreme Court case with Virginia Military Institute and their male-only admissions policy. The Commonwealth of Virginia asked Mary Baldwin College to design the program, and they did with help from Mayor L. Douglas Wilder, who was also the speaker for the anniversary parade, and former MBC President Cynthia Tyson.

The first VWIL class started in 1995 with Dr. Brenda Bryant, founding director of VWIL, and Brigadier General (VA) Michael Bissell. This military style program that teaches leadership has had 134 graduates and 40% of its graduates commission into the military. It is the most diverse corps of cadets and the only all-female corps in the nation.

Many alumnae and friends who support VWIL returned for the anniversary to see how the corps has grown and changed although many of the beginning traditions remain. Although VMI now accepts women into their institution, VWIL continues to flourish and anticipates increasing the amount of people in the program and the continual amount of leadership and discipline they send out into the world. -- Virtre Sterling

Taking a trip across large land masses and seas to experience a totally different civilization is exciting when one is receiving an education in a small town.

Recognizing the importance of study abroad, Mary Baldwin College offers a variety of universal study abroad opportunities. Regardless of the academic focus of a particular study abroad course, students are exposed to a broad range of culture in the places they visit. By totally engaging in different settings they can be exposed to hands on activities.

Students may spend a semester or a year abroad through a variety of programs, some sponsored by Mary Baldwin, some offered through a group of Virginia colleges or other institutions. Mary Baldwin College also offers a unique May Term Abroad study opportunity. May Term programs offer students the advantages of study abroad without having to commit to months or a year in a foreign country.

When taking a course where site and subject depend on each other, students travel with an expert in the field. Learning happens through experiencing, touring, and through informal on-site lectures.

Traveling abroad encourages students to be competent and flexible. It gives students a chance to experience culture shock and learn to handle certain situations that may be caused by a lack of knowledge of cultural norms. During this journey students gain a greater understanding and appreciation of their own cultures as well. Exposure to differences may result in the product of a greater sense of social, political, cultural, and economic inter-connectedness of peoples, nation, and cultures.

VWIL cadet, Jennifer Ardis '08, meets General John Jumper.

By Dawn Medley
Assistant Director of Communication

Victoria TenBroeck '05 was separated from the President George W. Bush by only a few yards in her front row seats at the swearing-in ceremony and procession.

Jennifer Ardis '08 took in the grandeur of the parade route while marching with her Marine Corps unit and mingled in a ballroom alongside four-star generals.

Alison Kaufmann '07 snapped photos with Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld, and Leigh Frame '06 partied with 7,500 people – including the President – at the Independence Ball.

"It was a night of pure appreciation for military service," said Ardis. She attended a gala called Saluting Those Who Serve. "Rank and branch of the military didn't matter because we were united in our commitment to the country."

The gala was star-studded, including Kelsey Grammar, Gloria Estefan, and a video message from David Letterman. It was the first of two opportunities Ardis had to be in the same room as President Bush and the First Lady. The second was during the Commander in Chief's Ball, where Ardis was chosen to represent her Marine Corps unit.

"Half of my unit is in or headed for Iraq," Ardis said. "It was very emotional and rewarding to be surrounded by people who know being in the military isn't an easy job and that sacrifices are made."

President Bush's inauguration was the fourth such event TenBroeck witnessed in person. She attended her President Bill Clinton's first inauguration in 1993 as a 10-year-old and has been present at each one since, although she admitted that she had the best seats this year.

"Our country doesn't come together for events like this often," said TenBroeck. "Just being there at the official ceremony was symbolic of a unified country – whether you support the president's policies or not."

Kaufmann and Frame traded the cold, outdoor events for dancing and mingling at two of the dozens of post-inauguration balls. Kaufmann and a friend who was a former intern on Capitol Hill reveled at the Congressional Leadership Ball. Frame attended the Independence Ball with her longtime boyfriend; his father works in the Federal Department of Transportation.

Black History Month

Black History Month traces back to 1926 to a man known as Dr. Carter G. Woodson. He was the son of two former slaves and grew up working in the coal mines. He entered high school at the age of twenty and graduated two years later. After high school he earned a Ph. D. from Harvard University. During his studies, he learned that the African-American history was not taught or discussed, and when they were, it was in a negative way. As a result, Dr. Woodson established the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History and founded the Journal of Negro History. In 1926, he began Negro History Week which was the second week of February. This week was chosen because it was the birthdays for both Frederick Douglass and Abraham Lincoln, two men that influenced the black American population. Although Black History month is the shortest month of the year, Dr. Woodson's goal has been achieved his ultimate goal, to educate and accurately document black people's success.

Susan Juanita Symmonds '72

Susan Juanita Symmonds was one of the first African-American graduates from Mary Baldwin College. She graduated in 1972 with a degree in Sociology along with Lelia Anne Lytle, the first fulltime African-American student to attend MBC.

Symmonds transferred to MBC in 1969 from the University of the West Indies. She had no idea what Mary Baldwin College had to offer -- the only thing she knew was that it was in the South.

Symmonds admits there was prejudice on campus. She would occasionally get "dirty looks", stares, and even some comments, but she ignored those individuals. She found a group of people who were open-minded and quickly made friends.

During her three years at MBC, there were a couple staff members and professors who took Symmonds under their wings. One of those is Bertie Huttard, who used to be a telephone operator at MBC but later retired. Ms. Huttard helped Symmonds feel comfortable in Staunton and at MBC. She would often invite her to her home on the weekends.

Dr. Frank Southerington was also among those who made Symmonds feel comfortable on campus. They became good friends although she never took a course with him.

"Susan was terribly outgoing," said Southerington. "I am very pleased that she remembers me after all these years, and I liked her very much."

While at MBC, she became involved. She was a member of the volleyball team, the Education Committee, Religious Life Committee, and was an Effie Johnson Nursery Volunteer while making both the Dean and Honor's List.

Overall, Symmonds recalls her experience at MBC a good one. Although there is one experience she said she will never forget.
"One day one of the white maids asked me when I started working at MBC," stated Symmonds. That statement hurt Symmonds, but she understood why she wasn't considered a student. Symmonds said the majority of the African-Americans at MBC were either maids or working in the kitchen, and that is why the assumption was made.

Symmonds, now a school social worker for emotionally disturbed students in New York attended her 10 year reunion, has not returned to Staunton in many years, but is glad she attended MBC, and has no regrets.

"I get magazines in the mail, and I am proud to see people in the pictures that look like me," said Symmonds.

The purpose of American College of Healthcare Executives "is to develop and promote standards of education and training for hospital and healthcare executives." The ACHE organization works to involve and include the Mary Baldwin campus by providing programs and lectures that not only benefit Health Care Administration majors but the campus as well. It is also important that we give back to the community as a form of social responsibility, as we did over the Christmas Holiday by buying gifts for less privileged children in Staunton and at Western State Hospital.

The members of American College of Healthcare Executives would like to encourage the students to become proactive and involved and to make ACHE your home!

Friday,March 11,2005 -Eastern Shore& Va. Beach

Leaving at 8am from Grafton parking lot was no fun. Our first stop was Broadwater Academy in Eastern Shore, VA, where our own Anne Holland went to school. Some former MBC parents were there and the kids were able to get out of class to hear us sing. The second stop was at the Barry Robinson Theater in Virginia Beach. A lot of girls in the choir are from the Hampton Roads area so it was nice to have families (including mine) to come. I was really looking forward to this stop because the theater is part of my old high school, Catholic High. After the concert, the choir had a nice treat at a Coldstone Creamery nearby, and the staff there just about dropped their jaws to the floor with the endless incoming of girls wanting some ice cream.

Saturday,March 12,2005 -Williamsburg

Our concert was at the Wren Chapel on the William&Mary campus. Family, Alumnae, and members of the Board of Trustees attended. After a successful concert, we had a beautiful reception at The Gallery in Merchants Square. Choir members got a chance to meet former MBC students and enjoy the gorgeous art.

Sunday,March 13,2005 -Richmond

Our last stop was First Presbyterian Church. The pastor's daughter went to MBC along with other women in the congregation. Before we knew it, it was time to head back to Staunton. Many THANKS to our Alumnae/i for helping to make the tour possible!

In the Theatre

Theatre can be seen as a canvas in which actors and actresses create their vivid masterpieces. On stage students can become artists, whether they choose to be on stage or back stage; whether they want to wear the makeup and costumes or create them; whether they learn to write or produce plays, students all play a part in producing the creation of art.

At Mary Baldwin, all students - not just majors - have five opportunities each year to participate in a main-season show, including an annual musical. They do it all: design and run lights, stage manage, build sets, design costumes, handle publicity, manage props, act, and direct. Mary Baldwin students fill all female roles. During May Term, students have opportunities to travel to London and elsewhere to study and experience varied styles of theatre such as formal, opera, ballet, circus, folk arts, and street theatre. Plays such as "The Glass Menagerie," "Into The Woods," and "Everyman," can be seen at the Mary Baldwin College Theatre.

The Mary Baldwin theatre holds events such as No Shame which is an "open mic" for live performances. On this stage one might hear a poem, or a song, see a dance piece, a puppet show, watch a monologue, mime routine, stand-up comedy, improvisation, jugglers, and magic act are some things one might see when attending this presentation.

Not only is the Mary Baldwin College Theatre for entertaining an audience it is also an academic theatre. Its primary purpose is to provide opportunities for teaching and learning the arts and crafts of the theatre. The theatre can provide practice under rough calculations of professional conditions and to expertise standards. Its secondary purposes are to enrich the learning of all students and to provide the finest theatre for the college and the community that is consistent with the goals of teaching and learning. Theatre is art and its implementation can't be successful without the indulgence of the Mary Baldwin College Community.

"Truth" About Professors

Skipping class because you know you have a paper due, sure does stink when you've already used three absences and it's only January. I mean, hey, you wouldn't have to skip class if the professor didn't assign several 1,000 word essays for one week. Don't they understand we have other important things to do like watch American Idol and talk about other girls on campus?

What better place to gossip about your Baldwin peers than our trusty Hunt Dining Hall? But doesn't it stink when you're trying to scarf down a burger and write a paper that's due for the professor sitting two tables away. It's even worse when you skip your professor's class for that day and you happen to run into them while standing at the salad bar. Oops! Remember there are only five people in your class, so you're professor knows when someone is missing.

Then there's our favorite, "the senile professor." Sometimes professors don't make it to class because they have to baby-sit, the weather is bad, or they simply just forget what day it is. So while you're text messaging a friend or humming your favorite show tune while awaiting your professor's arrival, just remember your professor is out saving the day by sparing you with another boring lecture or outdated educational film. Then you open your syllabus to see if they're a doctor or professor. This title determines how long you await their arrival to class. Not waiting for the professor to leave class usually upsets the professors. But no one drags the students out of bed when we forget class, now do they?

Hey, but where would this campus be if we didn't have such interesting and animated teachers? Many students at Mary Baldwin are very fortunate to have such a close connection and emotional bond with their professors. The professors are an attribution to the success of Mary Baldwin college students who have become a productive member of society.

In memory of Martha Stackhouse Grafton and Fletcher Collins Jr.

stories by Dawn Medley

Martha Grafton 1908-2005

Martha Grafton, often touted as an "unassuming realist" by students friends, and colleagues, died February 8, 2005 at 96 years of age Born in South Carolina in 1908, Mrs. Grafton earned he undergraduate degree from Agnes Scott College. She was just shy o her 22nd birthday when she started work at Mary Baldwin a assistant dean and instructor of history. She remained on th administrative staff, with her husband Dr. Thomas Grafton professor of sociology, until 1970. Named dean of the college i 1938, Mrs. Grafton served as assistant to the president through th difficult years of World War II and stood in as acting president fou times. She earned a master's degree in history from Northwestern University and was given an honorary doctorate from Mary Baldwi College in 1989. The Grafton name is also associated with a important college award: The graduating senior with the highes grade point average is given the Martha S. Grafton Award. Alumna are inducted into the Grafton Society – named for Dr. and Mrs Grafton – when they reach their 50th reunion. "As far as shaping th college, we had Mary Julia Baldwin in the 19th century and Martha Grafton in the 20th," Patricia Menk said. Martha Grafton was a ke player on the talented administrative team that guided Mar Baldwin through its formative years as a college. During her firs years at the college, she helped Dean Elizabeth Phfol Campbel establish a student government association, now in its 75th year, an write the first official student handbook.

Fletcher Collins Jr. 1906-2005

Fletcher Collins Jr, legendary Mary Baldwin College professor emeritus of theatre, hardly paused for "old age." At 75, "Fletch," as he was called by friends and family, was designated Cultural Laureate of Virginia. At 90, he shunned the idea of "acting old" in a local newspaper article. In his late 90s, he celebrated the 50th anniversary of Oak Grove Theater, the secluded woodland stage he created with his wife, Margaret, which has nurtured countless actors and booked sold-out performances for decades.

Those close to Collins knew he was getting older, but his unceasing energy and drive to be involved in new projects seemed to defy mortality. His unfailing spirit and vitality made it that much harder for people to say good-bye.

Fletcher Collins, 98, died in his Staunton home May 6.

Fletcher Collins is credited with establishing the modern drama department at Mary Baldwin College. For his numerous contributions, the theater in Deming Fine Arts Building was named in his honor in 1983. In 1997, Margaret and Fletcher – ever inseperable – were given the Algernon Sydney Sullivan Non-Student Award. One of the highest honors bestowed by Mary Baldwin College, the award recognizes spiritual qualities, nobility of character, and unselfish service to the community.

At least one of Collins' courses at the college was so popular that students practically had to sign up as freshmen to take the class as seniors, said Ulysse Deportes, professor emeritus of art. Desportes worked with Collins for many years at MBC and on other theater productions. "He lived and breathed theater," Desportes said.

Thanks for a great year.

The 2004-2005 school year brought changes to Mary Baldwin for students and our environment. The first full year of Composing Our Future has passed. The changes that have arisen from the college's plan have affected the community in a variety of ways. Improvements and advancements in business endeavors keep Mary Baldwin moving forward with the times. I know everyone will benefit from the 10-year plan.

I hope you enjoy this edition of Bluestocking. The staff and I have had alot of fun creating this historical document. You will find that we have designated club pages and layouts. Also there is an index so you can easily look up your friends. Enjoy!

I wish all of you the best in your personal endeavors.
